Question One:

Homeopathy, as a profession, presents many challenges and opportunities. Homeopathy requires assiduous study and reflection, scrupulous adherence to principles, a well-honed ability to elicit and understand the core of human suffering and courage to build a practice in a skeptical society. Please explain why you want to be a homeopath.

Question Two:

Becoming a homeopath requires considerable resources -- financial and personal. Tuition is $6,800 per year plus the cost of books and supplies. Approximately 15 - 20 hours of study time per week is required. Upon finishing the 4-year academic and clinical training program in classical homeopathy, it will take time to build a practice and achieve financial rewards. Considering your family, your financial reserves, your health, your job situation and other commitments, how are you going to accomplish this? Please be specific.
